WEATHER FORECAST

Joe Thomas of the Sussex County Emergency Operations Center has provided the following forecast from the National Weather Service in Mount Holly, NJ - The Storm Prediction Center has moved the most significant severe weather risk northwestward 30-60 miles (graphic viewable at https://www.beach-fun.com/images/stories/SvrThreat_02242016_12pm.pdf), and now straddles the I-95 corridor, including Richmond, the Tri-Cities, Farmville, Tappahannock, and South Hill. The basic reasoning for the higher than average threat remains the same from our earlier briefing, and this outlook could again shift later this afternoon.

The main message - severe thunderstorms and possible tornadoes remain possible this afternoon. The main threats are damaging winds and tornadoes. A tornado watch will likely be issued for portions of our area in the next 2-4 hours. Once a watch is issued for your area, closely monitor radar for thunderstorm trends. If a severe thunderstorm or tornado warning is issued, take actions to protect life and property from wind/wind damage and debris.
