WORKERS COMPENSATION UPDATE

State insurance regulators approved a 15% increase in the workers' compensation rates paid by businesses at the end of 2012. A Task Force was formed by the General Assembly in January of this year. According to the task force, the rates have risen by 34 percent in the last two years. Lieutenant Governor Matt Denn is chairing the panel and released recommendations on Monday, May 13, 2013. The report includes 18 ideas to improve the system in Delaware. Half of the recommendations relate to the fees that insurers can charge for medical services provided to injured workers, including a plan for a two-year freeze on increases in hospital reimbursement payments based on inflation. Proposals and recommendations also include fee schedules for lab tests, price controls for prescription drugs and caps on the number of drug tests and more. The task force suggests the Department of Insurance hire an attorney to serve as a ratepayer advocate. Senate President Pro Tem Patricia Blevins said the recommendations would be molded into legislation that she hoped to pass by the close of this year's legislative session on June 30th.
